Introduction: About The Ned Club

The Ned Club is a private members club located at the Square Mile. As such, it is a very suitable place for financials to grab a drink after work. I must say, the atmosphere was mesmerising. The building itself has been richly decorated with neoclassical elements, and much of the furniture is reminiscent of the 20s one century ago.

Once inside, you are welcomed by a stage where live music is played. There is plenty of room for dancing and making a few moves, and the music played was of high quality, with themes such as blues, rock'n'roll and pop. Below picture shows the some action the next day I arrived.

Also, there are two bars with plenty of drinks to choose from. Below picture gives you a glimpse of one of the bars at the left side of the building (from a street-side perspective). Marble counters, baroque-style leather seats and lights create a pleasant and warm setting.

At the rear corner on the right of the building is a hallway leading to the hotel lobby, access is most likely restricted to private members yet the view is a welcoming one, even from a distance.

One of my favourite details is the little statue at the staircases, which seems to resemble Cupid (not sure). Downstairs you can find a 'locker', after which there is a separate room for private members.

On a final note

My impression of The Ned Club so far has been a marvellous one, and definitely a place I would recommend and return to. And yet, since several areas are restricted and accessible for private members only, 'you ain't seen nothing yet' ;)!
